The New Virtual Classroom

A blended approach to teaching on-line

Where: Virtual Free Conference Call

When: District 5 On-line Conference
1530 - 1630,
November 6, 2020

The on-going pandemic places additional emphasis on the trend to teach classes using on-line tools. This seminar provides practical advice to help our instructors prepare for our future. It provides:

- A review of the needs for virtual courses
- Information on how to plan to deliver an on-line class including selecting instructors and assistants
- Suggestions on how to advertise on-line including dedicated web pages to describe the course and inserts on social media to attract attention
- Registering students on-line and accepting payment

- Suggestions on testing on-line
- Established on-line systems to administer delivery of the course material including required synchronous participation following by the student working to review previous sessions. The example system is the free to use MOODLE learning management system.
- Example of how to utilize various automated instructional aides to emphasize course material.

Essential for instructors!

Recommended for all members who organize & plan online presentations.
